Eat Like the Cast of Wicked

Randy Stricklin-Witherspoon began his professional cooking career by feeding the stars and backstage crew on the Broadway shows where he worked as a dresser. That led to a catering company and, now, SpoonfedNYC, a Hell's Kitchen duplex with a performance stage and a menu inspired by the chef's South Carolinian upbringing. To wit: candied pork belly and Brussels sprouts, chicken-fried meatloaf, and blackened red snapper with grits. There are plans for a Sunday gospel brunch and outdoor dining when it warms up. 331 W. 51st St., nr. Eighth Ave.; 646-368-1854; late Feb.
